MEETINGS MEAN PROGRESS!

In your community. In your country. Anywhere in the world. When meetings, conventions and exhibitions are taking place, good things are happening. And one way or another, most of them benefit you!

Meetings, conventions and exhibitions – what we refer to collectively as the Meetings Industry – attract big money to a community. Delegates are among the biggest spenders of any visitors, and the benefits of their spending are widely disbursed throughout the entire economy. Not only hotels and restaurants but retailers, attractions, taxis, entertainment facilities and a host of service suppliers share in the resulting benefits.

And this isn’t just about money. By bringing a world of knowledge to our doorstep, meetings also improve the level of expertise available in the community in such important areas as technology and medicine. And in the same time, they create a whole new audience for showcasing local products and services.

To a country, meetings are being everything from international exposure and prestige to an important source of foreign revenue. And the incremental tax revenue that meetings generate help support a wide variety of public programs and benefits that wouldn’t otherwise be possible.

Around the globe, meetings help people share information and advance scientific, economic and professional development. They’re the way the world gets together to compare notes, address common issues and resolve international differences – and that helps make our world a better place to live.

How in Metropolis, meetings, conventions and exhibitions create over €250 million in economic benefits every year. As the people involved in making these kinds of events happen, we’re proud of what this means to our community – and we want you to know you have a stake in what we’re doing.

So think of us the next time you hear about meetings, conventions or exhibitions going on in your community. And remember – you’re sharing in the benefits.
